

3 months ago

Addendum:

The closure of the inquiry without communication, subject only to a status change, reduces the exchange to a purely transactional encounter.

Throughout my engagement, I have upheld the dignity of every single individual agent of Google who intersected with this matter. This was not incidental, nor accidental, neither strategic, nor a tactic; it reflects an operating standard internalized for conditions of sustained, deliberate human regard. The consistency of this proposition is self-evident inspite of the substance of engagement.

I regret that the manner of closure reflects a disconnect between the level of conduct upheld and the level of recognition received.

I do not believe it represents the unifying relationship that implicated the relatedness of the parties' to this matter.

---

An institution that cannot distinguish between a frustrated customer and a person of demonstrable integrity, engaging in good faith over 56 days, has confirmed through its own behavior the structural finding the audit documents analytically: the accountability architecture has no mechanism for recognizing what it is encountering.

---